WESBANK

Science centre opens

■ CARINA ROUX
 CARINA@MEDIA24.COM

A Science Teaching and Learning Centre (STLC) was officially opened at Wesbank No.1 Primary School last week Thursday 21 July.

This is one of 87 such centres that have been constructed at schools in three provinces since 2011 in partnership between non-profit company Advancing Knowledge, Garden Cities Archway Foundation and the respective provincial education departments.

The centres are an extension of curriculum support provided by Advancing Knowledge which focuses on science, technology, engineering and mathematics (Stem) education. It also serves as reward to committed science teachers, school management and learners.

The driving force behind the initiative is Professor Shaheed Hartley, director of both the Science Learning Centre for Africa at the University of the Western Cape (UWC) and Advancing Knowledge.

Hartley said it's called Science Teaching and Learning Centres as it "goes beyond a laboratory".

THE CENTRES ARE AN EXTENSION OF CURRICULUM SUPPORT PROVIDED BY ADVANCING KNOWLEDGE

It is all about intriguing learners to make them enthusiastic to learn science. Activities are used to demonstrate concepts, principles and theory and science teachers are trained to implement and impart knowledge to the learners. Science is made practical and visible.

"The achievement of South African learners in recent international benchmark tests (eg. TIMMS 2019) paints a very dim picture and one that points to a national crisis," Hartley said.

"Developing a culture of science teaching and learning is a good start to prepare learners to take up their place in the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR)".

Advancing Knowledge developed courses for teachers that are endorsed by the South African Agency for Science and Technology Advancement (Saasta) that deals with teaching science in foundation, intermediate and senior phases.

I AM Y HELPS GIRLS AT KALKFONTEIN PRIMARY

Yolanda Wenn, founder of the I am Y Projects and Charity Foundation, handed over 316 packs of sanitary towels to Kalkfontein Primary School last week. "I selected this school because of the high unemployment rate in the area," said Wenn. She's been doing community work since 2020 and recently registered her non-profit organisation.

Mobile business comment awaited

Businesses operating from vehicles and trailers such as food trucks, barber shops and clothing outlets have become increasingly popular in Cape Town.

In harnessing this opportunity and accommodating this global phenomenon, the City has drafted a Mobile Business Policy, which aims to support this growing sector by putting measures in place that will make it easier to apply and operate.

The City's Economic Growth Directorate is urging the public to submit their comments on the draft policy before 4 August when the public participation period closes.

"At the beginning of this year, I said that our recovery from Covid-19 must lead to a different economy. To do that, we need to reimagine the way we live, work and play," said Mayco member for economic growth James Vos.

Vos said governments in high performing economies are more open to experimenting with new approaches to markets and regulations by coming up with programmes to test new ideas in a variety of circumstances, adapting where necessary, and then adopting policies that work.

In recent years, there has been an increase in businesses becoming agile and demand-driven, and ditching the fixed brick and mortar locations which bring high running costs and single location consumers.

"I am excited to announce our plans of a pro-growth agenda that involves strategies to improve productivity, income, and demand for the benefit of businesses.

"As a City, we welcome innovative ways of doing business that stimulate our economy and create jobs. The emerging trend of businesses offering services from vehicles and trailers is an example of such innovation as they can move to where there is demand."

The draft policy can be viewed on the City's website and proposes what trucks or trailers can be used as mobile businesses; rules, roles and responsibilities and the concept of mobile trading areas.

Submit your comments by 4 August via the following channels: Online at www.capetown.gov.za/City-Connect/have-your-say or via email to Mobile.BusinessPolicy@capetown.gov.za.

Wesbank No.1 Primary School principal Greg Gordon said they will be looking at collaboration with neighbouring schools by making the centre available for use.

Science teacher, Hanlie Zwaan, said the addition to the school is a privilege for which they accept responsibility and accountability. "We want to convey our utmost thanks to the various partners involved."

Director of Garden Cities Archway Foundation Myrtle February, a former school principal herself, said she knows what it means to receive such a facility.

According to John Matthews, CEO of Garden Cities, the Science TLC project is one of the vehicles through which they as a corporate organisation invest in meeting South Africa's future human resource.

Organisations and corporates that want to contribute to this initiative can contact Prof Hartley at shartley@skatt.co.za or 083 793 0436.
